

New Crunchfish Digital Cash release targeting the HDFC Bank and RBI project

Crunchfish today released a new version of the Digital Cash SDK, targeting feature and performance requirements in the project with HDFC Bank and Reserve Bank of India (RBI). This version will be used to demonstrate and pilot offline retail payments.

The release targets the HDFC Bank and Reserve Bank of India \(RBI\) project and addresses requirements in the upcoming pilot. Focus areas for the new version have been to add additional security features and to streamline the integration of the Digital Cash SDK. HDFC Bank and one additional bank started the integration in August with the previous Digital Cash SDK version and will now upgrade to this improved version.

Highlight of the new Digital Cash version includes:

- New risk limits that comply with RBI regulations in India
- Access control management
- Improved certificate management
- Improved fraud detection capabilities and fraud management
- Additional security features to prevent cloning and double spending offline
- Improved backend integration components and documentation

This release will also be made available for other customer integration projects through the Crunchfish Developer portal.

"Our development team has been working hard to meet the requirements in the HDFC Bank and RBI project. The new version of Crunchfish Digital Cash has been released to the HDFC project team and they will now upgrade the solution for offline retail payments. In parallel with the integration of this version and the upcoming pilot, we are also working on a new version that will be the baseline for commercial deployment. This version is planned to be released at the end of the year." says Magnus Lageson, CPO at Crunchfish Digital Cash.
